UK Outlook for Monday 16 Aug 2021 to Wednesday 25 Aug 2021:
A showery start to next week is likely with showers most frequent in the north and east of the country where it will also be breezy at times. The best of any drier and sunnier weather across the west and southwest. Moving further into next week and for the rest of the period, high pressure may become more dominant with many areas seeing more settled conditions. However, changeable conditions remain possible across parts of the north and spells of heavy showers or thunderstorms can't be ruled out across parts of the south at times. Temperatures expected to be around average for most for this time of year, though with some warmer weather in more settled spells.
